Parole Granted

The NSW State Parole Authority has granted parole to offender David James Ross having determined it is appropriate and in the interests of community safety.

Ross was sentenced to Life for the murder of Michael Kelly in Western Australia in 2002.

He was given a non-parole period of 22 years which expires 2 August 2024.

At a parole review hearing today, the Authority confirmed it had received the recommendations of the Serious Offenders Review Council and Community Corrections supporting his release to supervised parole.

The Authority was advised Ross has completed programs to address his offending and taken part in a restorative justice program and his risk of reoffending is assessed as medium-low.

He has demonstrated excellent conduct in custody and participated in work release, day weekend leave without incident.

The State did not oppose parole.

Having considered all the material before it, the Authority determined parole was appropriate for the protection of the community and directed Ross be released 2 August 2024.
